

Speciality Sub-Committees Info Pack

Do you want to commit to long-term volunteering for DWW, using your knowledge and experience to help us develop quality programmes, whilst having engaging conversations with others who share your interests?

We are seeking a number of volunteers from a range of disciplines to join our speciality advisory groups. Under the guidance of the DWW training director and/or programmes team, the role involves a variety of different activities, including:

- providing advisory input to DWW project content
- reviewing (and designing) educational content, utilising national and international guidelines
- monitoring and evaluation
- inputting into project design and planning
- offering general advice from your professional expertise
- hosting external networking events or talks based on your area of expertise
- writing articles and news stories for the DWW website

The committees are made up of experts from various backgrounds, both clinical and non-clinical advisors, from doctors, nurses, paramedics, pharmacists, to academics and humanitarian practitioners. It is also an opportunity for you to engage in discussions with other professionals about medical and global health topics, relevant issues within your specialisms, and to build your networks.

We have specialty sub committees for the following areas:

- Medical education
- Emergency care
- Paediatrics
- Sexual & reproductive health
- Infectious diseases
- Palliative care
- Primary care

We are interested in hearing from people from the following backgrounds:

- Nursing & midwifery
- Humanitarian medicine
- Primary care
- Emergency care

Save a Life. Change a Life.
